Press release copy

Swim England launches major consultation on the future of competitions across all aquatic sports.

Swim England is inviting members, clubs and stakeholders from across all its aquatic disciplines to have their say on the future of competitions as part of a comprehensive review being launched this month.

The Competition Review aims to gather meaningful insight into the current competition structure and experience across swimming, diving, artistic swimming and water polo. This insight will help shape how competitions evolve to ensure they remain inclusive, enjoyable and fit for the future.

We're listening

Swim England is changing and your voice matters. Whether you're a participant, parent, volunteer, coach or official, your feedback is vital in helping shape the next generation of competitions across our sports.

The consultation seeks to:

- Understand the current competition experience, including areas such as opportunities, time, format, entry processes, cost, digital systems, scheduling and qualification routes.
- Identify pain points and successes across different user groups.
- Explore ways to make competitions more inclusive, accessible and fun for all participants.
- Gather ideas for future improvements and how they could be implemented.

The consultation survey will be available online and promoted through Swim England's communication channels and online networks. Members are encouraged to share their views and help shape the future of competitions across all aquatic sports.
